Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 102

The following is a quotation of the appropriate paragraphs of 35 U.S.C. 102 that form the basis for the rejections under this section made in this Office action:

A person shall be entitled to a patent unless –

(b) the invention was patented or described in a printed publication in this or a foreign country or in public use or on sale in this country, more than one year prior to the date of application for patent in the United States.

Claims 1 and 6 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(b) as being anticipated by or, in the alternative, under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as obvious over Kanzler (US 4,941,221).

With respect to claim 1, Kanzler discloses an air mattress comprising: a mattress pad (10); a back support (31) to raise a part of (e.g. 25) the mattress pad; and an air pump assembly built into the mattress pad to inflate the mattress pad and the back support (see col. 1 lines 54-62 and col. 5 lines 33-44). As Kanzler does not depict or describe his control system as being external to his apparatus, Kanzler is considered to disclose an air pump assembly (control system) built into the mattress pad. In the instance that this is not the case, it nevertheless would have been obvious to one having ordinary skill in the art at the time the invention was made to employ a built-in pump assembly in order to reduce the number of components for the apparatus and avoid potential loss of one of the components. Note the prior art of record for several inflatable mattresses having built-in pump assemblies.

With respect to claim 6, wherein the back support has a V-shaped cross section (see Figures 6, 8 and 9), or at least as V-shaped in cross section as the back support of the instant invention.

Claim 1 is rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(b) as being anticipated by Grudzinskas (US 4,619,481).

With respect to claim 1 and referring to Figure 21, Grudzinskas discloses an air mattress comprising: a mattress pad (chair); a back support (inflatable chambers shown within upholstery 133) to raise a part (134) of the mattress pad; and an air pump assembly (135) built into the mattress pad to inflate the mattress pad and the back support.

Given the broadest reasonable interpretation, the inflatable recliner has been considered as an air mattress insofar as the recliner could function as a mattress.

Claim 1 is rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(b) as being anticipated by Wilhoit (US 5,771,514).

With respect to claim 1, Wilhoit discloses an air mattress comprising: a mattress pad (10); a back support (one of 16, 18 or 20) to raise a part of the mattress pad; and an air pump assembly (12) built into the mattress pad to inflate the mattress pad and the back support.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

Claims 1 and 6 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Collymore (US 6,298,511) in view of Wilhoit (US 5,771,514).

With respect to claim 1, Collymore discloses an air mattress comprising: a mattress pad (12 and one of 22 when in the position shown in Figure 2); a back support (other of 22) to raise a part of the mattress pad; and an air pump assembly (38) to inflate the mattress pad and the back support (see col. 4 lines 33-34). Collymore fails to teach that his pump assembly is built into his mattress pad. Wilhoit discloses an air mattress comprising: a mattress pad (10); a back support (one of 16, 18 or 20) to raise a part of the mattress pad; and an air pump assembly (12) built into the mattress pad to inflate the mattress pad and the back support. In view of Wilhoit's teaching, it would have been obvious to one having ordinary skill in the art at the time the invention was made to modify Collymore to have a pump assembly built into his mattress as opposed to external of the mattress in order to reduce the number of components for the apparatus and avoid potential loss of one of the components.

With respect to claim 6, wherein the back support has a V-shaped cross section, or at least as V-shaped in cross section as the back support of the instant invention.

Conclusion

Applicant's amendment necessitated the new ground(s) of rejection presented in this Office action. Accordingly, THIS ACTION IS MADE FINAL. See MPEP § 706.07(a). Applicant is reminded of the extension of time policy as set forth in 37 CFR 1.136(a).

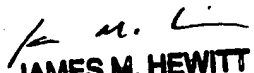

A shortened statutory period for reply to this final action is set to expire THREE MONTHS from the mailing date of this action. In the event a first reply is filed within TWO MONTHS of the mailing date of this final action and the advisory action is not mailed until after the end of the THREE-MONTH shortened statutory period, then the shortened statutory period will expire on the date the advisory action is mailed, and any extension fee pursuant to 37 CFR 1.136(a) will be calculated from the mailing date of the advisory action. In no event, however, will the statutory period for reply expire later than SIX MONTHS from the date of this final action.
